

Strengthening Education to Drive Economic Development

A Manual for Replicating
The CEC Experience in Your Community

Karla Yoder
Donna Walker James

Academy for Educational Development (AED)

December 2006

Development of this manual was funded by the Georgia Department of Education through the Central Educational Center Dissemination Initiative.

Acknowledgements

The authors would like to thank, first and foremost, Mark Whitlock, CEO of Central Educational Center (CEC). This manual could not have been created without his thoughtful input, endless patience with our questions, and careful review of each draft.

We are very grateful for the many individuals in Douglas, Whitfield, and Walton Counties who participated in the CEC Dissemination Initiative and shared their challenges and successes with us. Their enthusiasm and perseverance inspired us. Special thanks go to Dwayne Daniels of Whitfield Career Academy, Mark Peevy of the Walton Career Academy, and Judy Scherer of Douglas County Schools for their generous time and the open access to their institutions.

Anthony Chow, while at Florida State University, developed the original ADDIE Accomplishments Checklist, provided helpful background material and data for this manual, and reviewed early drafts.

Ivan Charner, Vice President and Director, AED National Institute for Work and Learning, provided valuable contributions to the content of the manual and graciously reviewed numerous drafts.

Finally, the authors owe sincere thanks to Joe Harless of Newnan, Georgia, who led Coweta County in applying the ADDIE systems design process to public education during the creation of CEC. This process formed the basis for the CEC Dissemination Initiative itself, as well as for the development of this manual.

Any errors remaining in this document are the responsibility of the authors alone.

Electronic copies of this manual can be downloaded from <http://www.gacec.com> under “Replication Central.”